Anonymous. A Jivaro War Trophy: Human Head artificially shrunken by the Jivaro Indians. Bulletin of the Buffalo Society of Natural Sciences, Vol. XI, pp. 196-197. Buffalo, New York, 1915.

Illus.

S9. 110. 11. 3.

[KS: A brief description of a Jivaro shrunken head. It does not contain any information that is not to be found in other sources in the files.]

Barton, D.R. The Indoor Explorer. Natural History, Vol. XXXIX, pp. 64-66. New York: The American Museum of Natural History, 1937.

1 illustration.

Yale: S9.099.v.39.

[KS: This article contains a description of head shrinking. Details of the technique are covered more fully in other sources in the files].

Beuchat, H., and Paul Rivet. La langue Jíbaro ou Siwora. Anthropos, Vol. IV, pp. 805-822, 1053-1064, Vol. V, pp. 1109-1124. St. Gabriel-Mödling bei Wein, 1909-1910.

Linguistic charts.

Yale: Nk10 ≠ An89.v.4.

[KS: This article contains grammatical notes and a comparison of the language with the languages of neighboring peoples.]

Blomberg, Rolf. From a Journey to the Jibaro Indians in Ecuador. Ethnos. Vol. II. pp. 123-129. Stockholm: The Ethnographical Museum of Sweden, 1937.

7 photographs.

Yale: NK10. Et7, v. 1-2.

[KS: The author made a three months journey to the Jivaro to make films and collect zoological material. The article is brief and does not contain any data that are not discussed in more detail in other sources in the files].

Farabee, William Curtis. Mummified Jivaro Heads. The Museum Journal, Vol. X, pp. 178-183. Philadelphia: The University Museum, 1919.

3 plates.

Yale: A53p. 212. 10/11.

[KS: This article is an excellent summary of Jivaro culture, but does not contain any data that is not fully covered in other sources in the files.]

Holloway, H. L. East of the Ecuadorian Andes. Geographical Journal, Vol. LXXX, pp. 410-419. London: The Royal Geographical Society, 1932.

Sketch map.

Yale: E10. R81g. v. 80.

[JKM: In 1931 Holloway was commissioned by an English Company to make a report on the geology in the Oriente Province. It is a good description of the topography of the country. There is a short account of the Jivaro but it does not add any new material to the sources which have been processed for the files.]

Simson, Alfred. Travels in the Wilds of Ecuador, and the Exploration of the Putumayo River. London: Sampson Low, Mortson, Searle, and Rivington, 1886.

Pp. 261; one folded map; appendix.

Yale: Ecuador, Ehea. 886.

[KS: The chapter in this travel book is taken verbatim from source 3: Simson.]

Sinclair, Joseph H., and Theron Wasson. Explorations in Eastern Ecuador. The Geographical Review, Vol. XIII, pp. 190-210. New York: The American Geographical Society, 1923.

4 tables; 11 figs.; folding map at p. 410.

Yale: E10. G132. v. 13.

[JKM: In 1921 the authors explored a large tract of land in eastern Ecuador to determine the possibilities of eventual production of petroleum. They had little contact with the Jivaro and their comments do not add any new material to the files.]